In the trenches. To "shoot ten francs" is verboten, as it were.

Reaching the third line trench the major turned—not toward his battalion post, as usual, but to the right to interview Sammy Smith.

Sammy's fellow shootman saw the major coming and he got away.

Just then many things happened all at once in the third line—down to the left of the communication trench. About twelve German shells banged where the major would have been walking if he hadn't turned to stop the crap shooting. They threw mud on the battalion post, but nobody was hurt.

The major looked at the bursting shells and at Sammy Smith. Then he picked up the bones and put them in his pocket.

"You might have been sentenced to five days for gambling," said the major. "But I'm letting you off this time."

Rules Regarding The Soldiers Mail Here are some instructions for the proper sending of mail from soldiers to the home folks and from the latter to the former.

Every soldier should familiarize himself with the mailing rules and send this paper home so that his relatives may understand them.

To Enlisted Men Letters written or mailed by soldiers, sailors and marines of the United States forces in Europe engaged in the present war require no postage stamps. Mail is carried and delivered free.

Such letters must show that they are from soldiers, sailors or marines stationed abroad. In the upper left hand corner of the envelope must appear the name of the soldier, sailor or marine together with the designation of the organization to which he belongs. For instance, John Doe, Company C, 5th United States Regiment.

Tell the home folks frankly about your financial arrangements—how much you are saving and how you are saving it—your war risk insurance and Liberty Bonds, if you have them.

To the Folks at Home Fourteen out of every fifteen men in the United States service overseas, will "come back." This is the experience of our Allies, according to official British statistics. It shows the importance of "keeping the home fires burning" for the boys' return, and of keeping his spirit up by frequent letters while he is away. Thousands of letters and packages to the boys overseas will go astray because they are not properly addressed. Read the following instructions carefully and see that your mail goes straight.

Mail for men in the American Expeditionary Forces must be addressed according to the following formula:

From Mrs. John Smith, Blank Street, New York City

John Smith, Jr. Company X, Infantry American Expeditionary Forces

Under no circumstances should the location or station of the unit, or the country of destination, be included in the address.

In order to be sure that your mail is correctly addressed and bears the right postage, take it to a post office and ask at the stamp window. Money orders to go overseas may be obtained at domestic rates. Applications for such money orders must bear full military official designation and address.

No letters containing money of other valuables will be accepted for registration. No indemnity will be paid for loss of registered mail.

Note to the Home Folks Do not get the idea that our boys are "going over the top" to die. Ninety-three in each hundred will return. Do not let the "Well, if I do not see you again, good luck and God bless you" farewell send a man off with a stone where his heart should be. Keep this idea out of your letters and their thoughts. To be victorious they must be hopeful.

Keep the spirit of the slogan "Prepare to Live" before them. Write often. Get them thinking about and preparing for the job they want when they return. Encourage their confidence. Do your part to keep the home fires from breaking. Urge them to come home clean and ready for the opportunities that will be waiting.

Thrift promotion is teaching them to be independent financially, fit physically, trained mentally and close to God spiritually. Put these thoughts into your letters. Let them know your savings are increasing their chances of returning and making their present conditions easier. Inform yourself about War Risk Insurance and the other financial matters of those close to you in Uncle Sam's Service.

When you're sittin' in the evenin' At the front of your old tent, Jus' a-smokin' and a-thinkin' -Of past times and money spent, There comes to you a feelin' That again you'll never roam, For you jus' can't help a-thinkin' Of that little girl back home.

You wonder what she's doin' And if she thinks of you; If you wasn't in the army You'd be right with her too. You think of what's ahead of you And you hate to be alone. For it always starts you thinkin' Of that little girl back home.

But it's nice there in the evenin' When the daily grind is past, A-smokin' and a-dreamin', How long this war will last? But a fellow can't help thinkin' And it cuts right to the bone If he stops a while to ponder When he'll see that girl back home.

We're glad to do our duty, And we'll stand it like a man For duty's duty, plain as day— We'll do it if we can. But there always comes a feelin' When we're sittin' there alone, Jus' a-thinkin' and a-dreamin' Of that little girl back home. —Corporal J. J. Harries

Attend the food sale at Mallory's Grocery Saturday.

The sale of J. T. Nabb, announced last week for Tuesday, January, 29th has been postponed, on account of the cold weather to Tuesday, February 5.

A soldier in his uniform got on the Northwestern train at Stanton. He happened to sit down by a number of farmers. The soldier immediately became interested in them as they were all talking German and upholding the Kaiser. The young man called them for this and told them that they would have to "cut it out". They failed to do this so the soldier started in to whip the whole bunch, here the conductor stopped the train and allowed the combatants to get off the train. The soldier boy demonstrated the American method to them and it was a sad looking outfit of farmers that got back on the train. They were somewhat wiser and tried to do something at the police court at the next town, however they were disappointed again as the court complimented the soldier boy on his American spirit.

New Dieting Advice. An anxious young theological student once asked Henry Ward Beecher what was the best and most successful method of preparing for a lecture or sermon. The reply shot back in one sentence, "Just fill yourself chock full of your subject and then let nature caper!" And the best general advice for hygienic dieting runs along similar lines; just spread a liberal table and then let your appetite cable.—Exchange.
